Killing of top Abu confirmed

US help cited in Sulaiman's death

By Dina Pazzisuga

ABU SULAIMAN, A SENIOR LEADER OF THE EXTREMIST group Abu Sayyaf and alleged mastermind of high-profile kidnappings and deadly bomb attacks in Mindanao, has met his end in a Sulu jungle, the Armed Forces announced yesterday.

Indonesian, whose real name was Abdul Asad Sali, was killed by elite Army troops in Tulunan, Sulu, on Tuesday but officials only confirmed it yesterday.

They said he was the leader behind the 2001 Davao Palace kidnapping, the 2004 Superferry 14 bombing and the 2005 Valentine's Day bomb attacks.

"We are very elated by this announcement. I would personally mark him as somebody higher than [the former chairman] Roderick Abalos" in the group's hierarchy, AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Hermenegildo Espinoza Jr. said at a news conference in Camp Aguinaldo.

Espinoza said that when Abu Sayyaf founder Abdurrahman Andal was killed in Basilan in 1999, the likes of Sulaiman and Ibrahim Haplos took command before Sulaiman's younger brother Khalid took over leadership in the new leader.

THE COURT OF APPEALS IN CEBU CITY issued a 30-day temporary restraining order on the enforcement of the dissolved order against Elio Guin Tio Jr.

The two-page order, issued by the Court of Appeals in Cebu City at 4:30 p.m. barred the Office of the Ombudsman, Department of Interior and Local Government, and other government agencies from enforcing Tio's, 74, from office during the period.

The order signed by Associate Justice Francisco Antonio, Aquino Dizon and Justice Dizon was issued to "preserve the status quo" and to "defend the rights" of the petitioner.

The state-owned copy was received by the office of the governor minutes after hundreds of fully armed policemen surrounded the provincial capitol.

The assault came before the lapse of the 48-hour deadline set by Interior Secretary Renato Devesa for the dissolved and suspended local executives to leave their respective offices. The deadline lapsed at noon today.

The Ombudsman dismissed Tio, along with Mayor Mercedes "Theres" Tronillo, of Puro City, Mayor Antonio Prospero Espinosa of Jaro, Mayor Edilberto and several other local executives, for his alleged involvement in graft.

INQUIRER *Southern Luzon*Pila townsfolk preserve
heritage townBy Nina Colmenero-Ellega
Pila, Laguna

EVIDENCE OF HISPANIC INFLUENCE in the small Laguna town of Pila, 50 km south of Manila, have remained intact for centuries in spite of wars and recurrent typhoons.

All the residents here say they have preserved the 13 ancestral houses and its old church in their town, they would answer. "Our town is historic," Senen pointed out by the elderly son that a miracle happened during World War II when Japanese forces bombed towns and cities, including churches across the country.

"After the Japanese were about to hit the town and the church, what they saw was a sort of body of water," 84-year-old Dr. Edna Belano said. "Why and how that happened has remained a mystery until now under people have called the town Island in the Sea (Island Town)."

Belano is a member of the Pila Historical Society Foundation and serves as secretary. The foundation consists of residents who have taken the task of preserving the town's culture, historical and environmental heritage.

Established in 1993, the foundation organized the repair of the church and set the research on Pila's history. Its efforts have been when the National Historical Institute (NHI) on May 17, 2000 declared the town center a national historical landmark.

Since then, the town has an annual cultural festival and a Pila.

Oldest resident

Belano, whom the parish office mentions and is the oldest resident alive, mentions that family's 80-year-old house.

A 1958 graduate of Medicine from the Manila Central University, Belano can recall the names of her ancestors and the names of her family's house.

She remembered to the youngest of 12 children of Ricardo and Belano, the mayor of Pila (now Pila Municipality) of Pila after his death. He was the first mayor of the town and the first mayor of Pila in 1907, and during the 1900s, the first woman to win a winning prize in the town.

During her mother's time, he was credited to name the "San" (Santa) house along the Spanish side, Belano said.

These grandfathers' names used to be San Antonio, but the Spanish government is said to order prohibiting the use of the names of saints.

Then, her grandsons changed it to Belano, from the word "Belano," which means "change."

Pila is a family of politicians, Belano said. The grandfathers was a doctor of surgery (surgery) and was a doctor of surgery.

A brother of her grandfather joined the Philippine, a revolutionary organization during the Spanish era.

Unlike her brother and sister who eventually moved to Manila, Belano chose to remain single and stay in Pila. Her adopted child and her brothers accompanied her.

After graduating from the university, Belano moved in a doctor at the Laguna Provincial Hospital in Iloilo. From there, a 30-minute travel from Pila. She also practiced in her hometown, she said.

"I was also known here as a midwife," she mentioned. "So of the children I helped to be born became my grandchildren, my nephews for them to be born."

She could no longer remember the names of her grandchildren, however.

Belano became active in politics, serving as councilor in 1966 and provincial board member in 1976.

Her story

Belano said she maintained the house in its state before.

"We cannot really remember and sometimes we know because there are so many things to maintain here. And besides, this is maintained in family members and not only in her but the house from our parents," she said in Pila.

Belano said she still remembers her older sister, Lita, practice medicine during the Spanish era.

"The way one of the most beautiful people in town, Lita, was known as the sister who visited her," she said, pointing to a photo of her sister in a white gown.

But Lita died early of pneumonia, she said. During World War II, her Belano house was transformed into a hospital for wounded Filipino soldiers.

Back then, Belano was only a college freshman. She said her family brought her to Manila, except for her father who chose to stay in the hospital.

Belano practices family medicine by visiting patients and spending time in her home with laboratory and surgery.

But the photos of sister Dolores Ochoa, who she said, is her first cousin's grandson, are displayed in the house.

Indeed, Belano's heritage were disregarded because its residents have been enthusiastic in preserving the old house.

Lolita Belano, granddaughter of Belano is a secretary and lives in among them who want to rebuild the old house.

"As much as possible, we like family will maintain the house. The house is very important because our ancestors had lived here," Lolita said.

Old church

The town's parish, its church, under St. Anthony of Padua, has existed for almost two centuries.

Each year, there are about 100 people from the church which was established after the patron saint of the Franciscan Order in 1576.

The church was then made of bamboo but it is now built using stone.

In 1906, the people were forced to move from Pila (now Pila) to Manila, Laguna, to go to prison since because of the Spanish era.

Pila's office mentions, Lolita Belano said the history and names of the church from the previous time were also used to build the existing church. She said the foundation of the old church was still in place in nearby Pila town.

On July 9, 2002, the church was declared the National Shrine of St. Anthony of Padua.

Treasures

The NHI also recognized the town as the most important archaeological site in the country. Apart from the historical street, the town has a museum, the Pila Museum, which contains artifacts dating back to the 13th to 16th centuries.

An archaeological excavation in the 1980s led by architect Leonardo Lora in Pila, Laguna, Pila's Museum also yielded rare glass, gold jewelry and porcelain pottery with both Philippine design and Chinese influences.

Pila Museum curator Ricardo Morales said that during the excavation, he and his colleagues and Chinese workers found back to the 13th century stone house.

A paper written by architect and historian led by Dr. Leonardo Lora, titled "Treasures of Pila," claimed that excavation was a local practice based on the kinds of stone found. These include shell, coral, limestone and large stones (stone).

Students have taken school and even brought the stone to have a glimpse of the artifacts, said Morales. Municipal Engineer officers Gerardo Torres and the officials had ordered that no inhabitants would be put up in the heritage site.

Although the site is under the NHI, but it is being an according to preservation and conservation, the site.
